They're for the kidneys only—
Have made great cures in Hopkinsville.

Wm. C. Davis, cooper, of No. 603 North Main street, says: "A dull bearing down pain across my kidneys and through the small of my back made it so painful for me to stoop or lift anything that I was unable to do any work or to have any pleasure.
Whenever I took cold it settled in my back and at night bothered me a great deal while lying in bed."

Sharp twinges often kept me awake for hours and in the morning I arose feeling tired and devoid of all energy and ambition. The condition of the kidneys was especially annoying and distressing at night. I doctored and used many remedies until I became discouraged, for instead of getting better I seemed to grow worse. Finally I happened to read an advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, and as they were highly recommended by a friend, I bought a box and after using them a few days I felt a decided improvement. I continued with the treatment and in a few days in my back left me entirely and the action of the kidneys was restored to a normal and healthy condition."

Romance as it is writ.
Stars bladded the canopy and the moon, shedding a soft and subtle silver, sent shafts of light to glint upon the bosom of the Cedar. Two young lovers, Algernon Edward Knottington and Constance Clementine Atherton, wandered near the village upon the river shore.

They paused beneath the grandeur of the stars! taken in a voice impassioned, yet low and gentle in its earnestness, the lover-spoke his affection. The maiden, trembling, listened to the burning words that filled her heart with yearning, but her tongue spoke not. She was stilled by a strange fear that mocked her happiness.

"What! Are you afraid, frightened like a timid child?" the lover cried, wrapping his arm around her automobile coat.

"No! No!" she cried in startled tones. "Not that! Not that! But tomorrow we separate, our lives diverge, our paths lie wide apart for months—and who shall say—"

With kisses he smothered the words that fell and murmured softly: "Fear not, Constance—dear, dear Constance!
The world is wide, but I will ne'er forget thee! Ah, the ripple of that voice! the liquid purity of those great, brown eyes! the pector of those lips! the raven black of this dark hair! the thousand perfumes of thy presence! All these I could ne'er forget, sweetheart! Never! Never!"

The lilt of his voice leaped to the girl's cheek, and she buried her face in his ulster as he continued:
"No, Constance! our hearts are beating in a rhythmic alchemy of love which neither time nor absence can efface. Here, Constance, is the ribbon we found yesterday. See, I have cut the silk in twain and on the ends have scratched words our hearts can understand. You keep that end and I will cherish this, and when we meet again it will be to join the two forever."

And if either learns to love another, then, he or she is to send the ribbon to the one who yet loves, that each may know."

"Why speak of impossibilities, darling? Not yet shall the flowers fade in autumn, the winter come and go, and the apple blossoms hang beautiful like this," pointing in the moonlight, "than I, my sweet, my own, shall come to wed my flower, my delectable, my love," clasping her in his arms and pressing her warm face to his. "You will be far away and eyes more beautiful than mine voluptuous, needless fair words and soft smiles. I shall not see you again, and I shall miss you terribly, and I shall think of you constantly and love you more and more. I shall think of you when
